Distinctive Features of the Course:

- Encounter a blend of classic and canonical literature alongside contemporary authors and the world of popular culture
- Work with a very friendly, welcoming staff who will do everything they possibly can to bring out the best in you;
- Meet with world-class literary scholars, award-winning novelists and poets;
- Study abroad for a semester or year with English departments in France, Spain and Bulgaria.
- Take part in the subject's cultural enhancement programme, including trips with your mates to sites of regional, national and international interest, with regularly scheduled events on campus, theatre performances, visits to museums and galleries, stately homes, festivals and fairs, musical events;
- Take advantage of English-related work placements in years 2 and 3;
- Go on to a Masters degree in English, Popular Culture, or Media Studies, and consider entering our PhD programme.

A placement can be undertaken anywhere; local, national or even, in some instances, international. During a placement, you will be doing similar work to a normal employee of the organisation giving you a unique insight into your chosen profession or sector, the opportunity to acquire crucial personal skills and also the opportunity to build a network of useful contacts. Many companies that employ graduates use placement programmes as a method of recruitment so you could be fast tracked into employment or onto one of their graduate schemes if you impress them.

The team at The Workplace constantly search for new placement opportunities but if you find an opportunity that interests you or you have been successful in securing one yourself, contact them for further information and support.

Educational Aims of the Course:

This course will give you the opportunity to experience and explore a range of literary and non-literary texts from the Renaissance to the present day and from the Western Hemisphere to the West Midlands. It features a balanced curriculum of canonical writers and genres such as Shakespeare, the Romantics and the great Victorian novelists alongside the challenges to this tradition offered by Modernism, 1960s radicals and those marginalised by class, gender, sexuality and race.

Throughout the programme you will receive the theoretical, philosophical and contextual tools with which to critically examine the processes of literary production and reception, and to make informed judgements about literary value and cultural capital.

This course also provides you with a thorough grounding in the oral, written and digital communication skills essential for developing and sustaining a successful professional career in the twenty-first century. When you graduate you will have learned not only how to express yourself to best advantage, but also have strengthened confidence in your own voice and originality of perspective.

Lectures

Seminars

Tutorials and supervisory meetings

Interactive workshops

Independent research

Individual and group student presentations

Assessment Methods:

At the University of Wolverhampton, a variety of modes of assessment will be used to support and test your learning and progress and to help you develop capabilities that are valued beyond your University studies and into your working life. Your course may include a variety of assessment activities:

Written examinations (including online examinations, open and closed book examinations and quizzes)

Coursework (for example, essays, reports, portfolios, project proposals and briefs, CVs, poster presentation)

Practical (for example, oral and video presentations, laboratory work, performances, practical skills assessment)

In the final year of your undergraduate degree, and at the end of your postgraduate degree, you are likely to be expected to write an extended piece of work or research, such as a dissertation or a practice-based piece of research.

Student Support:

Students with demonstrable need of a level of support greater than what can be provided in office hours are referred to the Faculty of Arts Academic Skills Support Team, as well as the series of study skills workshops offered in the Learning Centre. The VLE will include study skills-related materials such as stylebooks and shared URLs that link to various on-line study skills websites (e.g., Purdue OWL and Monash Academic Literacy sites), and the Faculty of Arts Online Writing Lab was launched in 2015/16 specifically to address the gaps in student attainment of literacy skills.

Most research on academic literacies and study skills development advocates embedding them in the subject rather than through bolted-on learning experiences and much of the Level 4 programme is geared towards developing your generic and subject-specific study skills. The Humanities' new Level 4 module 4HU003 From Student to Scholar focuses on strengthening a range of academic skills. You will be taught basic techniques in coursework planning, structuring, drafting, researching and revision through small workshops and 1-2-1 tutorials. Level 4 in-class activities and workshops, which are done in timed situations, and on-line critique circles and weekly postings teach you to become better time managers. At least two core modules at Level 4 require you to be reading and writing every week, and research shows that the 'little and often approach' has considerable impact on improving skills via repeated practice.

Formative assignments and learning activities offer you opportunities to write and revise using feedback prior to submission for assessment. Formative feedback for revision encourages you to develop and hone problem-solving skills, writing, and critical thinking (selecting rhetorical strategies for more persuasive argument/exposition). Additionally, many modules will give you numerous opportunities to engage in peer feedback activities and writing workshops, both in class and on-line which promote both collaborative and independent learning. You will also receive timely and frequent feedback, providing personalised study skills support.

Subject specific research skills are embedded in module learning activities - both in-class and out-of-class - and require you to use electronic and Learning Centre resources (e.g., Summons, e-books, LION, online/print newspapers and various search engines, databases, and electronic archives) to regularly locate information about authors, newspaper demographics and theoretical/critical texts to engage in problem-based learning (most writing tasks engage students in PBL) and complete assessment tasks.

Employability in the Curriculum:

This degree equips students for employment in any area where language skills are important: whether in journalism, media, or in administrative jobs. English graduates are valued for their capabilities in critical thinking, evidence gathering and evaluation, argument or point-of-view construction and advocacy, and problem solving, with these transferable skills proving highly desirable throughout the employment market. Many graduates have proceeded to postgraduate study, gaining Masters degrees, teaching qualifications, and PhDs, and a large percentage of our students have gone on to enjoy fulfilling careers in education at all levels.

The completion of a Sandwich Year will enable you to gain valuable hands on experience in a relevant work environment. This will not only provide additional practical subject skills but it will also develop personal transferable skills such as communication skills, problem solving skills and demonstrate competency in working with other people. This will increase your employability and assist you in gaining employment in the future.
