Course Information

Location of Delivery:	University of Wolverhampton
Category of Partnership:	Not delivered in partnership
Teaching Institution:	University of Wolverhampton
Open / Closed Course:	This course is open to all suitably qualified candidates.

Entry Requirements:

Entry requirements are subject to regular review. The entry requirements applicable to a particular academic year will be published on the University website (and externally as appropriate e.g. UCAS

- 240-280 UCAS points with a minimum of 180 points from at least two 'A' levels
- BTEC QCF Extended Diploma grade MMM, BTEC QCF Diploma grade DD
- Access to HE Diploma full award (Pass of 60 credits - of which a minimum of 45 credits must be at level 3 including 18 at Merit or Distinction).

Distinctive Features of the Course:

The course allows you to study a full range of topics from both English and History in an innovative, supportive and exciting environment.

- The course is one of the few new universities to offer modules in every literary period from the Renaissance to the present day.
- The course is recognised nationally as a leader in the incorporation of IT and digital resources in the classroom.
- You will be taught by leading scholars and academic experts, with a proven and respected research and publications record.

A placement can be undertaken anywhere; local, national or even, in some instances, international. During a placement, you will be doing similar work to a normal employee of the organisation giving you a unique insight into your chosen profession or sector, the opportunity to acquire crucial personal skills and also the opportunity to build a network of useful contacts. Many companies that employ graduates use placement programmes as a method of recruitment so you could be fast tracked into employment or onto one of their graduate schemes if you impress them.

The team at The Workplace constantly search for new placement opportunities but if you find an opportunity that interests you or you have been successful in securing one yourself, contact them for further information and support.

Educational Aims of the Course:

The English and History integrated joint gives students an opportunity to develop a deeper understanding of their heritage and cultural identity, along with the chance to explore other cultures and traditions. Using a wide range of literary and non-literary materials, the programme examines the dynamic relationship which links all forms of cultural activity to the passions and prejudices, hopes and fears of real people facing the specific challenges of their times. Students on this course will develop a greater appreciation of social and political forces which shape our world and its communities. They will acquire the ability to identify and employ a range of oral, written and digital resources, enhancing their skills in information gathering and self-expression which are valued so highly by future employers.

Teaching, Learning and Assessment:

The traditional combination of lecture and seminar is accompanied and varied by other teaching and learning activities appropriate to particular modules. These include interactive lectures, individual and small group presentations, student-led seminars, small group and classroom exercises and discussions, workshops, forums and surgeries, work-related and service-learning assignments and activities, and engagement with electronic learning and teaching materials. Students will interact/collaborate with other undergraduates from a variety of backgrounds and cultures, addressing critical and creative material that reflects and promotes awareness of cultural diversity. Students can also undertake a period of sustained independent study through the third year project. At all levels they are encouraged to read widely and critically, to write, and to incorporate information and communication technologies into their learning practices.

Assessment Methods:

At the University of Wolverhampton, a variety of modes of assessment will be used to support and test your learning and progress and to help you develop capabilities that are valued beyond your University studies and into your working life. Your course may include a variety of assessment activities:

Written examinations (including online examinations, open and closed book examinations and quizzes)
Coursework (for example, essays, reports, portfolios, project proposals and briefs, CVs, poster presentation)
Practical (for example, oral and video presentations, laboratory work, performances, practical skills assessment)

In the final year of your undergraduate degree, and at the end of your postgraduate degree, you are likely to be expected to write an extended piece of work or research, such as a dissertation or a practice-based piece of research.

Student Support:

The student support and guidance mechanisms are those provided by the standard University and School systems.

Staff can refer students to the FOSS/FacArts Academic Competency Unit for one-to-one tutorials and workshops should they require additional support beyond module and/or outside of office hours.

At level 4 students are shown how to locate and access the University's Sharpen Up Your Skills website and where the Study Skills section in Harrison Learning Centre is located. They are also introduced to the subject librarians (who uploads information retrieval/study skills materials and activities onto level 4 VLE topics).

VLE Topics include study skills-related materials such as stylebooks and shared URLs that link to various on-line study skills websites (e.g., Purdue OWL and Monash Academic Literacy sites).

Most research on academic literacies and study skills development advocates embedding them in the subject rather than through bolted-on learning experiences and much of the level 4 programme is geared towards developing students' generic and subject-specific study skills.

For example Writing for Academic Success is a generic, discipline-linked skills module where each student is assigned an e-tutor to provide individualised instruction. Also, in Reading Literature students are taught IT skills through small workshops and 1-2-1 tutorials. Level 4 in-class activities and workshops, which are done in timed situations, and on-line critique circles and weekly postings teach students to become better time managers. At least two core modules at Level 4 require students to read and write every week, and research shows that the 'little and often approach' improves skills considerably via repeated practice.

Formative assignments and learning activities offer students opportunities to write and revise using feedback prior to submission for assessment. Formative feedback for revision encourages students to develop and hone problem-solving skills, writing, and critical thinking (selecting rhetorical strategies for more persuasive argument/exposition). This also moves them towards more self-regulated learning (engagement with feedback promotes reflection and self-assessment). Additionally, many modules afford students numerous opportunities to engage in peer feedback activities and writing workshops, both in class and on-line which promote both collaborative and independent learning. Students receive timely and frequent feedback, providing personalised study skills support.

Subject specific research skills are embedded in module learning activities - both in-class and out-of-class - and require students to use electronic and HRC resources (e.g., summon, e-books, LION, online/print newspapers and various search engines) to regularly locate information about authors, newspaper demographics and theoretical/critical texts to engage in problem-based learning (most writing tasks engage students in PBL) and complete assessment tasks.

Employability in the Curriculum:

Graduates from this course will be extremely attractive to any employer in the education sector, holding qualifications in two key components of the national curriculum. And whilst primary and secondary school teaching is the largest single destination for our graduates, Wolverhampton students from this course have gone onto careers in: journalism; publishing; art gallery, museum and archive research administration; advertising and marketing; public relations; human resources and many other posts within the commercial sector which require creativity and excellent skills in written and oral communication. A notable proportion of our graduates have also undertaken postgraduate education in recent years, studying for Masters and PhD degrees.
