Applicants must hold a Postgraduate Diploma in Human Resource Management or Human Resource Development.

Distinctive Features of the Course:

This course allows professionals in possession of a Postgraduate Diploma in either Human Resource Management or Human Resource Development to top-up to a masters award on successful completion of a Masters project module.

The Masters project module allows for the identification of an organisation-critical strategic people-related issue in any field of human resource management, human resource development or organisational development and for primary research to be carried out into the issue. The resulting project will not only allow the development and demonstration of a range of appropriate research skills, but also provides the organisation with an insight into the issue and practical recommendations to help address it. This links closely to the business and employability skills required at this level.

Educational Aims of the Course:

The aim of the course is to enable you to gain a qualification to enhance your employment opportunities in an international or UK setting, within the occupational area of strategic people management and human resources. You have the opportunity to undertake an individual project through research or within the workplace. Teaching, Learning and Assessment:

This is a blended learning course with supportive and structured learning activities on Canvas supported by regular in-class activities.

The online materials and face-to-face components of the module are integrated into a complimentary learning experience, which is engaging and relevant for students and resources are accessible online. Students are provided with a road map for studying each module in the form of a Homepage on Canvas.

Each Canvas Homepage sets expectations and includes an orientation to help students understand how to successfully navigate the different online components of the course and prepare for the face-to-face meetings.

The structure of each Canvas topic follows a standard Business School layout to ensure consistency and familiarity for students and to help them navigate the different modules they will be studying. The Canvas Pages are used to present learning inputs and related activities with a narrative flow; content is structured into bite sized inputs and activities, inclusive of any recorded slides. Each module Canvas page features a balance between interactive activities and short lecture inputs.

Regular opportunities are built in for formative feedback in class and online. For summative assessments on modules with more than one tutor a marking rubric is used to ensure consistency.

Blended learning lends itself to enquiry-based learning – this puts less emphasis on the lecture method of teaching and more on getting students to solve problems, evaluate situations, research topics or apply principles, which is more appropriate to business education. Face-to-face sessions are delivered in workshop mode with a set of task-based activities, which draw on the online content, and enable students to practically and critically explore the topic individually and in small groups.

Opportunities are built in for students to collaborate in peer-to-peer learning activities. This could include things such as small groups using a flipped learning approach, small group case study analysis, student-led assessment unpacking, group discussions, student-led seminars and problem-based learning.

The workshop and activity-based approach to learning enables multiple opportunities for formative feedback and self-diagnosis and testing to be built into the core content for each module, and there will be regular opportunities for small group and one-to-one tutorials for all students.

Assessment Methods:

At the University of Wolverhampton, a variety of modes of assessment will be used to support and test your learning and progress and to help you develop capabilities that are valued beyond your University studies and into your working life. Your course may include a variety of assessment activities:

Written examinations (including online examinations, open and closed book examinations and quizzes)
Coursework (for example, essays, reports, portfolios, project proposals and briefs, CVs, poster presentation)
Practical (for example, oral and video presentations, laboratory work, performances, practical skills assessment)

In the final year of your undergraduate degree, and at the end of your postgraduate degree, you are likely to be expected to write an extended piece of work or research, such as a dissertation or a practice-based piece of research.

Course Specific Support

A personal tutor is allocated to every student. Personal tutors maintain regular communication (virtual and/or face-to-face) with each of their designated tutees. Follow-up meetings are arranged with students who are not making satisfactory progress or who are at risk of withdrawal. Personal tutors assist students in their personal and academic development, planning and progression. As well as offering students advice and guidance to help them liaise with other staff and support facilities in their school and the University, including study skills support.

The course leader will monitor the academic and experiential quality of the course through Award Boards, focus groups and other channels. The course leader also supports and directs students proactively on the course, both collectively and individually, and responds to inquiries and requests from students with regard to the academic programme of study.

The Faculty Enabling Tutor liaises with the Student Enabling Centre (SEC) regarding provision for specific disabled students & disseminates information from the SEC on the needs of specific disabled students.

The Faculty Enabling Tutors also monitor requests for, and provision of, specific examination and assessment arrangements, publicise 'surgery' arrangements and make available time to meet with individual disabled students to enable them to discuss their own school-specific disability issues where necessary. The tutor takes a pro-active role in monitoring the welfare and academic progress of disabled students within the school.

Where applicable, in-class semester assessments are arranged by the module tutor. The module tutor will, where appropriate, ensure that any arrangements made for students requiring special consideration will be checked by the University Student Enabling Centre to ensure fairness and equality, and that the provisions of the University Equal Opportunities policy are met. These arrangements will apply to those students who have identified special learning requirements

Employability in the Curriculum:

The CIPD is world renowned for developing the standards for the People Management profession and for anyone wishing to pursue or further their career within the field it is essential that a CIPD postgraduate qualification is obtained, giving membership to the professional body.

Most organisations who recruit People Management professionals require applicants to either hold a relevant level of CIPD qualification or be studying to achieve one. International, national and local recruitment to the field of Human Resource Management, Learning & Development, Organisational Development is growing and as such competition for employment is high. Our programme is a robust programme that has been highly commended by the CIPD for many years
