Distinctive Features of the Course:

English Language & Linguistics students get to know each other and the teaching staff very well, and regard their lecturers as friendly and approachable. Our undergraduates come from a range of backgrounds, and all individuals are encouraged to make the best of their abilities. A distinguishing feature of the course is the expertise and enthusiasm of the teaching staff in face-to-face contact with students. The interactive and communicative methodology used ensures that a clear group identity is quickly established. Students are encouraged to work together throughout the course in order to support each other, build confidence and develop cooperative skills. The innovative nature of our assessments has been highlighted as a particular strength. Graduates from our course are gaining an excellent reputation locally, nationally and globally. They are regarded as professional, confident, committed, independent and resourceful with a high degree of practical and theoretical knowledge. They are highly employable, and those who progress to a PGCE or equivalent have an advantage over students from a non-teaching background. The English Literature and Language team at Wolverhampton has pioneered the use of interactive web-based forums for teaching and assessment. These activities have proved very popular with students. We also make use of online discussions, project based learning, and oral presentations which equip students with the digital literacy and oracy skills so needed in all workplaces.

Educational Aims of the Course:

The English Language and Linguistics integrated joint degree provides you with a detailed understanding of the nature of language and how it works, with special reference to English. You will study the ways in which sounds, words, grammatical structures, as well as real-life contextual factors, work together to create meaning. This knowledge is put to practical use in the study of a wide variety of topics, for example: the history of English, accents and dialects, creoles and international varieties of English, style in written texts, multilingualism, language and the mind, and cooperation, conflict and humour in spoken and online discourse. The programme offers a supported, stimulating and multicultural environment in which you can analyse language use in a variety of forms and contexts. Integrated into the course is discussion of the imbalances of power concerning language access and literacy around the world, access to literacy skills, rights for multilingual speakers and the rights and wrongs of English as a world language. You will develop a range of subject specific and transferable skills, including higher order conceptual and communication skills, enterprise, digital literacy and IT awareness, all of which are of immense value in graduate employment. You will have the opportunity to undertake work placements which utilise linguistic skills for analysis and to produce a report for that workplace feeding back the findings of your workplace research. You will also be able to produce a piece of supported independent research in an area of language and linguistics of interest to you, which is an excellent way of showing employers research skills, independence, agency and application of a knowledge base.

Learning, Teaching and Assessment

Academic Regulations Exemption:

1.2.5 There must be at least 33% difference between module diets for courses with different titles, rounded up to the nearest 20 credits. For example, a total of 360 credits is normally required for a Bachelor's Degree with Honours, and when applying the 33% differentiation rule it will therefore be necessary for the module diet to differ by at least 120 credits compared with any other course which leads to a Bachelor's Degree with Honours. Independent study modules, normally being generic in nature, are excluded from the minimum 120 credits required in this instance and should not contribute towards any percentage difference between courses.

For courses with a common Foundation Year, the level 3 module diet is not included, and the differentiation rule is only applied to credits specified from level 4 onwards.

For bracketed course titles, there must be at least 20% difference between module diets. On similarly named routes these will usually share the same diets at levels 4 and 5 given that all of the specialist modules are normally offered at level 6 (see 5.2.3).

Teaching, Learning and Assessment:

On this course students will encounter a variety of learning activities designed to equip them with both subject-specific knowledge and a range of subject-specific and transferable skills. These will include: lectures, seminars tutorials and supervisory meetings, interactive workshops, independent research Individual and group student presentations, in-class quizzes and tests, formal examinations. The use of digital resources for both assignments and in-class activities is promoted across all modules and forms part of some formative assessments. We also make good use of online for a for discussion of materials. On-line portfolios and blogs are used in some modules to allow Digital Literacy to be honed and expanded on. There are opportunities for work-based learning, as well as opportunities for study abroad.

Students receive feedback within 4 weeks of submission via the University VLE; types of feedback can include feedback grids, comments on the submission portal, audio feedback. A sample of work is moderated by a member of the subject team. Students have the opportunity to discuss their feedback in one-to-one tutorials by appointment.

Students are at the heart of our assessment design; you will have opportunities to select and develop assessment that suits your strengths and that develop new skills and abilities.

In the final year of your undergraduate degree, you are likely to be expected to write an extended piece of work or research, such as a dissertation or a practice-based piece of research.

Assessment Methods:

At the University of Wolverhampton, a variety of modes of assessment will be used to support and test your learning and progress and to help you develop capabilities that are valued beyond your University studies and into your working life. Your course may include a variety of assessment activities:

Written examinations (including online examinations, open and closed book examinations and quizzes)
Coursework (for example, essays, reports, portfolios, project proposals and briefs, CVs, poster presentation)
Practical (for example, oral and video presentations, laboratory work, performances, practical skills assessment)

In the final year of your undergraduate degree, and at the end of your postgraduate degree, you are likely to be expected to write an extended piece of work or research, such as a dissertation or a practice-based piece of research.

Student Support:

General University support:

University Learning Centres are the key source of academic information for students. Learning Centres provide physical library resources (books, journal, DVDs etc.) and offer a range of study areas to allow students to study in the environment that suit them best: Social areas, quiet and silent areas. Learning Centres also provide access to wide range of online information sources, including eBooks, e-Journals and subject databases. Learning Centres also provide students with academic skills support via the Skills for Learning programme. Students on campus can attend workshops or ask for one-to-one help on a range of skills such as academic writing and referencing. Students can access a range of online skills material at: www.wlv.ac.uk/lib/skills.

The University also has a host of other services to support you, please take a look at the Student Support website: www.wlv.ac.uk/current-students/student-support/. If you have any questions, need help or advice then ASK@WLV is there for you: www.wlv.ac.uk/current-students/askwlv/.

The University Student Support website offers advice on a variety of matters (careers, counselling, student union advice, etc.) Students can also access these services by booking appointment with the SU, careers, counselling services, etc. Course Specific Support (Marketing) At Level 4 you will be allocated an Academic Coach to help you to settle in to University and make the most of your first year of study. For Level 5 and above, a personal tutor is allocated to you and they will maintain regular communication (virtual and/or face-to-face) with you to support you as you progress. Should you encounter any difficulties, follow-up meetings are arranged to ensure that you make satisfactory progress or are not at risk of withdrawal. Personal tutors can assist you in your personal and academic development, planning and progression, as well as offering you advice and guidance to help you liaise with other staff and support facilities in your school and the University, including study skills support. The course leader will monitor the academic and experiential quality of the course through Award Boards, focus groups and other channels. The course leader also supports and directs you proactively on the course, both collectively and individually, and responds to enquiries with regard to your academic programme of study. The module tutor will, where appropriate, ensure that any arrangements made for students requiring special consideration will be checked by University Student Support and Wellbeing to ensure fairness and equality, and that the provisions of the University Equal Opportunities policy are met. These arrangements will apply to those students who have identified special learning requirements.

Course specific support

You will be assigned an academic coach when you join our course, who will act as your personal tutor at levels 3 and 4. Your academic coach will provide academic support and pastoral care, to improve engagement and facilitate learning whilst enabling you to gain transferable skills for future employment. This role will transfer to a member of the academic staff in the English Language and Linguistics team in levels 5 and 6 of your course. Your programme leader will also be available throughout the entirety of your degree to offer academic and pastoral support and sign-post you to other student services.

Employability in the Curriculum:

A degree in English Language and Linguistics equips you for any career requiring critical thinking, literacy competence, and a range of analytical and presentation skills. During your degree course, you will develop skills in linguistic analysis, in particular in the analysis of the ways in which we make sounds and the ways in which words and sentences are constructed. Skills such as these are valuable in careers such as speech therapy and English or foreign language teaching. You will also develop skills in textual analysis, indispensable for any career in which language plays a crucial role, for example, journalism, public relations, blog-writing, publishing, administration and management, as well as teaching. Some of the modules you will take deal with practical subjects. Examples are Introduction to TESOL (Teaching English to Speakers of Other Languages) and the Business and Community Link module. There is a further module in Language in the Mind, in which you learn about speech pathologies - a perfect grounding for a career in speech therapy. Students are encouraged to work in pairs or in small groups and so develop team-working skills. The diverse range of assessment tasks includes traditional essay-writing, problem-solving and analytical tasks, online interaction and oral presentations. In this way students develop a capacity for analysis and critical thinking as well as good communication skills in face-to-face oral settings, online, and in traditional written communication. Some of our undergraduate students have recently gained work experience as transcribers on staff learning and teaching projects, and in computer program development. Our degree course also provides excellent preparation for postgraduate study at Masters and Doctorate level, and an increasing number of our students are progressing to postgraduate study. Many of our graduates have progressed to PGCE study in English, from Primary to Tertiary level, and in related areas such as Basic Skills for FE (Literacy). English Language and Linguistics graduates work in a variety of local, national or international institutions, as well as ELT/Languages publishing & materials writing, translating, journalism, training & development, management & administration, personnel, speech therapy, Forensic Linguistics and non- Governmental organisations.
