Entry Requirements:

Entry requirements are subject to regular review. The entry requirements applicable to a particular academic year will be published on the University website (and externally as appropriate e.g. UCAS)

Applicants must have completed the Legal Practice Course, Bar Professional Training Course or the Postgraduate Certificate in Laws in Hong Kong (PCLL) or equivalent Professional Legal Qualification. Alternatively, legal professionals who undertook the former Law Society Final Examinations or Bar Vocational Course are also eligible for the course.

IELTS 6.0, or equivalent for non-UK students.

Distinctive Features of the Course:

This course provides an opportunity to top-up to a Master's degree, the LLM, for legal professionals (i.e. solicitors or barristers) who have successfully completed the Legal Practice course or Bar Professional Training Course of England and Wales, or an equivalent Professional Legal Qualification. Alternatively, legal professionals who undertook the former Law Society Final Examinations or Bar Vocational Course of England and Wales are also eligible for the course.

This course will allow you to develop an in-depth knowledge of a chosen legal area. Your chosen topic of legal research may be one of academic interest or a legal issue pertinent to legal practice. You will be instructed on how to critically analyse and understand the complexities that arise in your area of research. The course design will encourage you to challenge current intellectual thinking whilst developing an advanced knowledge and ability to analyse, in a critical manner, your selected specialist area of law.

This course allows you to study part-time, by distance learning, over one year with a flexible pace of study to enable you to fit in the course around your current work commitments. However, the University's academic regulations require the completion of the course within two years of enrolment.

Educational Aims of the Course:

This course will allow you to develop an in-depth knowledge of a chosen legal area. The course design will encourage you to challenge current intellectual thinking whilst developing an advanced knowledge and ability to analyse, in a critical manner, your selected specialist area of law. Your chosen topic of legal research may be one of academic interest or a legal issue pertinent to legal practice. You will be instructed on how to critically analyse and understand the complexities that arise in your area of research.

You will join a thriving postgraduate student body within the Law School and upon successful completion of the course you will possess highly valued academic and research skills as well as a range of transferable skills designed to enhance employability in a law-related career as well as in future research and academia.

When you enrol onto this course you will gain access to the University's specialist virtual learning environment (VLE) and a wealth of electronic resources to support your core studies and beyond. You will benefit from the academic expertise of the course team, including nationally and internationally recognised researchers, and you will be assigned a tutor to help guide you through your studies. The University's on-line study facilities, available via the University web pages, will allow you access to extensive course materials and University-supported learning resources.

This course, which is offered by part-time study over one year, will enhance the employability and promotion prospects of people in the legal profession and allied areas of work who wish to develop specialist knowledge in a specific area of law or legal practice. Furthermore, by choosing to study by distance learning you will acquire and demonstrate time management skills, independent learning, flexibility and the required discipline that prospective employers are looking for in a competitive employment market.

Alternatively holders of this award may also find positions in the field of education and research including continuing their study for a PhD.
