Distinctive Features of the Course:

The Religious Studies course involves both in class learning as well as out of class engagement with faith communities.

Educational Aims of the Course:

A degree in Religious Studies and Sociology offers you the chance to analyse and understand the complexities of the social world in which we live. Within Religious Studies, a range of methods combine with sociological approaches to the study of religions in local and global contexts, where you explore the issues that concern religious leaders and their communities. During your studies, you will learn about those concepts, theories and methods essential to what we call a 'sociological Imagination', and apply these social science research methods to a range of areas, some specific to each subject, and some areas like identity and gender, which both subjects explore. Religious Studies provides the opportunity to study the major world religions and explore themes relating to the full range of religious belonging in the UK.

As well as subject-specific knowledge, you will develop a wide range of key transferable skills including enhanced communication, analytical and technological proficiency. The degree encourages you to become digitally literate and intellectually curious, with the capacity to work both independently and cooperative. These skills will equip our graduates to use their knowledge in enterprising and profitable ways in their chosen careers and develop their roles within the wider community.

Teaching, Learning and Assessment:

The course provides for the study of a range of sociological and religious topics in an innovative, supportive and exciting environment. Modules are taught by leading scholars and academic experts, with a proven and respected research and publications record.

Learning takes place through a variety of activities and media designed to support the development of skills and achievement of learning outcomes. The course also increases students' digital literacy by widespread use of a range of formats to present materials electronically, including the VLE. The traditional combination of lecture and seminar is accompanied and varied by other teaching and learning activities appropriate to particular modules. These include interactive lectures, individual and small group presentations, student-led seminars, small group and classroom exercises and discussions, writing workshops, forums and surgeries, work-related and service-learning assignments and activities, and engagement with electronic learning and teaching materials. Students will interact/collaborate with other undergraduates from a variety of backgrounds and cultures, addressing critical and creative material that reflects and promotes awareness of cultural diversity. Students can also undertake a period of sustained independent study through the third year project. At all levels they are encouraged to read widely and critically, to write prolifically, and to incorporate information and communication technologies into their learning practices.

An important element of the course is tutor-supported and independent fieldwork. Many religious communities are within walking distance of the campus and allow for sessions to link the classroom and community.

Assessment is diverse and tailored to experiential learning. Students will encounter written essays, presentations, fieldwork reports, book reviews, media analysis and relevant research methods in a carefully scaffolded programme of assessments which is designed to introduce students at first year level to academic engagement with religion and which, by the end of the third year, will provide them with assessments directly linked to key employment skills.

Learning and Teaching Methods:

This data indicates the proportion of time in each year of study that students can expect to engage in the following activities (expressed as a percentage for each level).

Level	Teaching	Independent	Placement
4	24	76	0
5	24	76	0
6	20	80	0

Assessment Methods:

This data indicates the proportion of summative assessment in each year of study that will derive from the following: (expressed as a percentage for each level).

Level	Written Exams	Practical Exams	Coursework
4	8	4	88
5	8	0	92
6	7	4	89

Student Support:

Dedicated Subject Pages allow students to explore key online information sources that are recommended for their studies: for Religious Studies the link is www.wlv.ac.uk/lib/subjects/humanities

Employability in the Curriculum:

In level 4, specific modules address etiquette when working with faith communities.

In level 5, students visit faith communities, where they gain the skills of effective interviewing and its analysis.

In level 6, students prepare a presentation which deals with conflict and multiculturalism in the workplace. In level 6 students also gain experience in working with faith communities.
