Distinctive Features of the Course:

The course offers students an opportunity to examine a diverse range of interconnected topics within Social Policy that relate to contemporary economic, social and political factors. The course is distinctive in allowing students to study Social Policy as a specialist route and has a distinctive combination of modules.

You can develop the skills and knowledge that you need to study at undergraduate level, building on your strengths and working on your weaknesses, so that you can feel confident that by the end you are ready to commence a degree course, and to apply the skills to undertake the directed and independent learning which will help you to achieve your potential. This will allow you to embark on Level 4 study in an appropriate undergraduate discipline or combined award, confident that you have developed the skills and chosen the most relevant subject area(s) to specialise in, which will allow you to perform strongly at degree level and enhance your career aims.

Educational Aims of the Course:

Social Policy is the study of ways in which government, charities, and even businesses meet our welfare needs that we cannot meet ourselves. Including areas such as health, housing, education, benefits and much more, Social Policy at the University of Wolverhampton covers topics that are important in today's society, economy and politics.

As well as learning about why Britain has a welfare state, studying Social Policy involves looking at contemporary policies, the way welfare and services are delivered and ask questions about how this is changing. Over the last twenty years, Social Policy has been a key focus for local and national governments as well as increasing welfare provision coming from charities and private business. It is clear that this focus is set to remain for the foreseeable future.

Social Policy at the University of Wolverhampton is taught in a lively and engaging manner with plenty of opportunities for discussion, debate and questions. In addition to lectures and seminars, the course includes field trips and visiting speakers from a range of organisations. There is also a high level of staff support, with all teaching staff being available in their offices for students to visit every week and dedicated support for essay writing. Our teaching is informed by the extensive local research we carry out and is delivered through a diverse range of methods including lectures, seminars, workshops, guest speakers, tutorials and quizzes.

Graduating with a degree in Social Policy opens up a wide range of opportunities. For those looking for a job, our graduates are working in a diverse range of settings including housing, social care, immigration and numerous voluntary sector organisations. Employers are happy to take on Social Policy graduates as it shows you can understand policy development and the ways in which it works; these are valuable skills. To further enhance students' employability, the course includes opportunities for students to formally volunteer as well as having yearlong placement modules at level five.

For those wanting to study in more depth after graduating, many of our graduates progress on to postgraduate courses, such as masters programmes. This includes occupational courses such as Social Work as well as other courses studying areas such housing, international development, health and much more.

Learning, Teaching and Assessment

Academic Regulations Exemption:

1.3.1 - Each course will be made up of units of study called modules. Modules are discrete units of assessed learning at a given level, with coherent aims and learning outcomes. One independent study/dissertation 40 credit module will be permitted at level 6. A 60 credit dissertation/project module must be included at level 7 for the Masters award.

Whilst it is normal for a 40 credit module to be only available at level six as an independent study module, the option to have a year-long placement with an external organisation is an excellent opportunity to apply knowledge learned on the course and to enhance employability. However, it is felt that this is an opportunity best given to students at level five on this course to avoid too much independent study in the final year and to allow students to develop experiences and focus within a topic prior to starting their dissertation.

One of the key elements of Social Policy at the University is its strong links with external partners as well as students graduating with a strong employability profile. We are looking to build on this position by incorporating a year-long optional placement module within the second programme where students will spend time with an external organisation working on a defined piece of work. In addition to being academically rigorous, the placement will allow students to graduate with not just a final year dissertation where they have investigated a topic independently and in-depth, but also an independent piece of work that has been carried out with an external organisation and evidence a range of employability and independent skills whilst applying their social policy knowledge.

For this to happen in meaningful and effective manner that will be useful to external partners and also allow the students sufficient opportunity to become involved, contribute towards and write-up a defined piece of work whilst still studying, the module would need to run through the whole academic year, ie, across both semesters one and two. Furthermore, for the workload that would be expected, this goes beyond the remit of a standard 20 credits and, as such, the module would need to be 40 credits.

Signed off by DVC 19/07/2016

Section 1.2.7 - Exemption to permit a 40 credit Placement module at Level 5 to contribute towards independent study in addition to 40 credits worth at Level 6 (exceeding the maximum of 60 credits permitted for an undergraduate honours degree programme);

5SA013 Social Science Placement (40 credits).

Teaching, Learning and Assessment:

The programme adheres to constructive alignment by ensuring that learning outcomes, course content and assessments are coherent and coordinated.

As mentioned in the educational aims of the course above, the teaching methods are varied and include not only formal taught sessions such as lectures and visiting speakers, but also discursive based sessions such as seminars and workshops and individual tutorials. These are in addition to sessions such as quizzes, assessment preparation, and videos.

The assessments are similarly diverse throughout the course in order to maintain the students' interest as well as systematically assess their knowledge in line with the learning outcomes. Furthermore, the assessments are designed to contribute to employability by using methods such as presentations, reports and case studies that are likely to feature as part of students' subsequent careers. Presentations are usually in pairs, which encourages students' ability to work cooperatively in partnership.

Exams and essays are retained in the assessment portfolio as they have a clear academic role to play, but the balance features a strong employability focus.

Level	Teaching	Independent	Placement
3	24	76	0
4	21	76	3

Student Support:

A significant amount of support is provided for students by the university, including academic study skills and support for students with additional needs. Within the Social Policy team, we also encourage students to make full use of the four hours per week of staff availability time, with appointments available to be booked online as well as drop in sessions. Furthermore, every module has dedicated time set aside where teaching staff can provide assessment support and answer questions

Employability in the Curriculum:

Within the curriculum, the assessment regime of case studies, reports and presentations are set up in a manner that reflects many of the skills necessary to work within the field of social policy as well as further afield. The course also includes visiting speakers working within social policy and opportunities for volunteering and placements at levels four and five
