The charge for this will be a DBS fee of £44.00 and a £6.00 ID check service fee (all of which are subject to change year on year). You will also need an Occupational Health Check and a prohibition check prior to starting the course.

Those who do not meet the entry requirements may be offered an alternative course.

Opt-in points:

During Year 1 a student can move to the route which includes recommendation for QTS provided they have undergone the all of the processes in outlined in the section above. Students will be required to satisfy the requirements of the DfE for Initial Teacher Training PRIOR to beginning the route for recommendation for QTS.

The last opt-in date is the 1st September prior to the commencement of Level 5 studies.

Distinctive Features of the Course:

History is important: it shapes our lives and moulds our identities. Our fascinating course allows you to examine a wide range of themes and issues across a range of nations and periods. Focusing on the cultural, political, social and economic aspects of historical change, you will be encouraged to study particular areas of historical interest and controversy in depth. In your studies, you will learn the essential historical techniques of critical analysis, research methods and the skills required for handling and processing information.

This course provides the opportunity for you to attain Qualified Teacher Status (QTS) at the end of a three-year undergraduate programme in History, enabling you to teach in secondary schools without the need for a further postgraduate qualification: an offering unique to the University of Wolverhampton.

History is perennially popular subject in secondary schools and colleges, meaning there is always a vibrant jobs market for History teachers offering great opportunities for a rewarding and respected career in the secondary education sector for our graduates.

This course is ideal for those who already plan to teach once they have completed their university studies, but also offers the flexibility for students to change their mind, with the option to opt-out of the Secondary Education elements at the end of Year 1 and follow the BA (Hons) History course instead.

The QTS components of the course have three interrelated elements with critical reflection at the core:

- Professional studies
- Subject specialist studies
- School based teaching experience

Professional Studies are concerned with teachers' professional values, roles, responsibilities and development, together with whole school issues in education. Professional studies are taught through subject studies as well as some whole cohort lectures, mixed group seminars, and days in a variety of schools (including teaching placements).

Subject specialist studies are concerned with the knowledge, understanding and teaching of a particular subject. They focus on the key principles and key components of subject knowledge, the ability to apply principles and knowledge in the classrooms, and the assessment of pupils' achievements.

School-based teaching experience involves developing competency in classroom teaching to the standards described in national legislation.

Educational Aims of the Course:

With its curriculum structure providing a weighting of 66% of modules with the university's History, Politics and War Studies Department, this programme will provide you with excellent subject knowledge.

The range of modules you will study includes a core module in Year 1, which concentrates on the fundamentals of History as a discipline, along with a range of other options that help diversify and broaden your historical understanding. The modules available to you have been selected specifically to bolster your knowledge of topics which are likely to arise at Key Stage 3 and in the more popular GCSE and A-Level options at English secondary schools.

The university offers continuous support with study skills throughout the programme in a number of ways, as outlined in Student Support section of this form (below).

The course will provide you with a high standard of both historical subject content and pedagogical knowledge in addition to preparing you to take up a subject specialist teaching post in the secondary sector. The course reflects the specific and precise quality frameworks established by relevant government agencies, and complies fully with the relevant teaching standards framework. You will be provided with opportunities to contextualise and apply the knowledge gained on both sides of your degree as you develop a variety of teaching techniques during supervised work placements.

The BA (Hons) History with Secondary Education (QTS) course is specifically designed to ensure that those who are successful can be recommended to the relevant professional body for the award of Qualified Teacher Status (QTS), which is the recognised professional award required by all those who wish to teach in a maintained school.

The course is also designed to develop secondary school teachers who will be:

- Empathetic and committed to pupils' learning
- Reflective and reflexive
- Enthusiastic and innovative
- Open-minded and research-aware
- Capable of engaging in practitioner research
- Flexible and creative
- Knowledgeable – both in terms of the subject and pedagogically

The course will also help you to develop as a teacher who understands the links between subject knowledge and the curriculum knowledge needed to teach your subject. Equally, we seek to develop teachers who understand the needs of the individual pupil and the school community in which they will work.

Teaching, Learning and Assessment:

The learning activities on this course will help you to develop distinctive graduate attributes that will make you stand out and enhance our employability. These skills will be embedded into the curriculum throughout the course. On this course you will encounter a variety of learning activities designed to equip you with both subject-specific knowledge and a range of subject-specific and transferable skills. These are likely to include most of the following, depending on your choice of modules:

- Lectures
- Seminars
- Tutorials and supervisory meetings
- Interactive workshops
- Independent research
- Individual and group student presentations
- In-class quizzes and tests
- Formal examinations
- The use of digital resources for both assignments and in-class activities
- On-line forums

- On-line portfolios and blogs
- Teaching practice
- Teaching practice observations; coursework based on learning via teaching practice

Assessments: Formative assessments provide feedback and are not used in the grading process. Their purpose is to provide both yourself and your tutor with a gauge of progress. Summative assessments are used in the grading process. Most summative assessments (with a notable exception of exams) also have a formative aspect to them in that tutors will provide written feedback on the work. You should use this feedback to improve your performance on future assessments. Assessment methods are closely linked to the learning and teaching approaches used. A variety of assessment methods will be used during the course. These may include:

- Assignments
- Case studies
- Practical exercises
- Portfolios/e-portfolios
- Formal presentations
- Examinations and Time-constrained Assessments (tests)
- Group Project work
- Individual project Work
- Work-based assessments

Assessments will also focus on skills such as team working, time-management and developing Continuing Professional Development awareness.

Assessment Methods:

At the University of Wolverhampton, a variety of modes of assessment will be used to support and test your learning and progress and to help you develop capabilities that are valued beyond your University studies and into your working life. Your course may include a variety of assessment activities:

Written examinations (including online examinations, open and closed book examinations and quizzes)
 Coursework (for example, essays, reports, portfolios, project proposals and briefs, CVs, poster presentation)
 Practical (for example, oral and video presentations, laboratory work, performances, practical skills assessment)

In the final year of your undergraduate degree, and at the end of your postgraduate degree, you are likely to be expected to write an extended piece of work or research, such as a dissertation or a practice-based piece of research.

Student Support:

General University support:

University Libraries are the key source of academic information for students. Libraries provide physical library resources (books, journals etc.) and offer a range of study areas to allow students to study in the environment that suit them best: social areas, quiet and silent areas. Libraries also provide access to wide range of online information sources, including e-books, e-journals and subject databases.

Libraries also provide you with academic skills support via the Skills for Learning programme. While on campus you can attend workshops or ask for one-to-one help on a range of skills such as academic writing and referencing. You can also access a range of online skills materials at: www.wlv.ac.uk/lib/skills.

The University Student Support website offers advice on a variety of matters (careers, counselling, student union advice, etc.) You can also access these services by booking appointment with the SU, careers, counselling services, etc.

Course Specific Support

At Level 4 you will be shown how to locate and access the University's 'Skills for Learning' pages, which also informs you where the Study Skills section in the library is located. The Directorate of Academic Services (DAS) provides general academic skills support to everyone. You can attend a drop-in session for an individual, one-on-one discussion with a Learning and Skills Librarian for advice on areas such as academic writing, assignment planning, exam preparation and time management. In addition, there is a regular timetable of bookable workshops covering information and digital literacy skills, including academic referencing. You will be supported by a designated Liaison Librarian who is available to support research and project work. Further details on the DAS skills for learning page http://www.wlv.ac.uk/lib/skills_for_learning.aspx

If you have a demonstrable need for a level of support greater than that which can be provided in office hours, you might be referred to the School of Social, Historical and Political Studies Academic Skills Support Team, as well as the series of study skills workshops offered in the Library. CANVAS topics on the VLE include study skills-related materials.

Most research on academic literacies and study skills development advocates embedding them in the subject rather than through bolted-on learning experiences and many of the Level 4 modules are geared towards developing your generic and subject-specific study skills. The Level 4 History module, 4HS001: The Pursuit of History, focuses specifically on strengthening a range of key academic skills as well as those more central to the study of History. You will be taught basic techniques in essay writing, presentation skills, book reviewing, critical reading and finding and utilising online and print materials via small workshops. The other Level 4 core modules require you to be reading every week and contain a variety of different assessments spread across the semesters to help hone the skills required at upper levels of the degree as well as those central to the Teachers' Standards. The modules selected also match closely to core knowledge required of History teachers at Key Stage 3 of the National Curriculum for History (England).

You will continue to be supported outside your modules in Levels 5 and 6, through the School of Social, Historical and Political Studies' academic skills programme, offering a mixture of walk-in surgeries and pre-booked appointments with tutors from the History, Politics and War Studies team. The University Library also hosts a ranges of workshops to support and develop key skills in: academic writing, referencing, presentation skills, revision and critical thinking.

Formative assignments and learning activities offer you opportunities to write and revise using feedback prior to submission for assessment. Formative feedback for revision encourages you to develop and hone problem-solving skills, writing, and critical thinking. You will also receive timely and frequent feedback, providing personalised study skills support.

Subject specific research skills are embedded in module learning activities - both in-class and out-of-class - and require you to use electronic and Library resources (e.g. e-books, online/print newspapers and various search engines, databases, and electronic archives) to regularly locate historical and historiographical information in order to complete assessment tasks.

Students will receive continuous individualised supervision, advice and support throughout their teaching practice.

Employability in the Curriculum:

Throughout the course you will build up professional and employability skills and learn to apply the knowledge acquired in an enterprising way. You will be expected to constantly nurture your own intellectual curiosity. The tools, methodologies and techniques learned have been carefully selected to prepare you with the skills that employers demand, and the opportunities for work-based experience and placements ensure that you gain vital experience in the field of secondary education.

This degree specifically prepares you for a career in teaching History at secondary level, providing you with a strong grounding of knowledge in a National Curriculum core subject to Undergraduate degree level, alongside a recommendation for Qualified Teaching Status. You will emerge with the solid capabilities in critical thinking, evidence gathering and evaluation, critical analysis, academic writing and problem solving skills, which are essential for a successful career in education at all levels.

The Secondary Education component of the course guarantees a minimum of 120 days of classroom experience in Years 2 and 3 under the close supervision of experts in the field, providing one-to-one support with all aspects of your development as a teaching professional. The core modules in in the course will also allow you to complete the requirements of the Wolverhampton Employability Award.
