Other Requirements

Students must have studied a minimum of two years post GCSE level. However, it is expected that some applicants will be mature students with work experience, who wish to further their career development. These applicants will be processed through standard procedures, which may involve an interview as part of the process. Please see <http://www.wlv.ac.uk/mature> for further information.

Those who do not meet the entry requirements may be offered an alternative course.

Distinctive Features of the Course:

The War Studies and Politics team are research- active with specialisms in the areas of conflict resolution, European politics, American politics, military strategy and tactics and terrorism.

An innovative, evolving and well-resourced course, which combines the breadth of the Politics curriculum with the expertise gained from the longest running undergraduate War Studies degree programme in the UK

This degree is located in the Department of History, War Studies and Politics within FoSS which has a well-established tradition of student support in terms of academic counselling and skills development including 'one-to-one' student skills support.

A placement can be undertaken anywhere; local, national or even, in some instances, international. During a placement, you will be doing similar work to a normal employee of the organisation giving you a unique insight into your chosen profession or sector, the opportunity to acquire crucial personal skills and also the opportunity to build a network of useful contacts. Many companies that employ graduates use placement programmes as a method of recruitment so you could be fast tracked into employment or onto one of their graduate schemes if you impress them.

The team at The Workplace constantly search for new placement opportunities but if you find an opportunity that interests you or you have been successful in securing one yourself, contact them for further information and support.

Educational Aims of the Course:

As well as detailed knowledge of forms of conflict and how politics and political negotiation attempt to render violent conflict unnecessary, the course provides graduates with the generic skills of critical inquiry, the ability to undertake close textual analysis and the ability to demonstrate knowledge and present coherent arguments in a number of forms. As well as specific subject knowledge, graduates will develop a wide range of transferable skills including technological proficiency as reflected in the subject and university commitment to blended learning.

Teaching, Learning and Assessment:

Learning takes place through a variety of activities and media designed to support the achievement of the learning outcomes. This includes traditional lectures, seminars, class-based activities, group work and individual tutorials. Such activities help students to become aware of and critically engage with the underpinning theories of War Studies and politics. In addition the course also increases students' digital literacy by widespread use of VLE. Field trips are utilised on the course (including the option of a week-long residential trip to Normandy) in order to give students the opportunity to engage with primary sources. The opportunity to undertake an extended piece of research via the level 6 project helps develop students' capacity for independent study and self-motivation, and offers them the opportunity to nurture their intellectual curiosity in an enterprising way. Employability is not only enhanced by the subject-specific and digital literacy skills developed on the course; there is also the opportunity to undertake a volunteering placement that can be incorporated as part of the programme. The disciplines of Politics and War Studies are designed to encourage students to develop their critical and analytical skills in relation a range of key debates related to the issues of rights and responsibilities. (These include factors such as the role and obligations of governments, the purpose and appeal of ideologies, and the causes, consequences and resolution of war and conflict.) The course examines such issues from a British, European and wider international perspective, drawing on case studies from both the historical and contemporary periods. This focus and the accompanying skills that it develops provide students with the opportunity to increase their awareness of ethical responsibilities related to the debates surrounding global citizenship.

Student Support:

The course team are conscious of the necessity of supporting students' learning throughout their studies. In the early stages of the course specific academic guidance on key skills is built into the core modules at level 4. This includes formative assessments with extensive feedback related to the summative tasks, in order to clarify for students what is expected at this level. These support sessions are integrated into the weekly programme to ensure the advice is accessed by all students. The team also work closely with the School's Student Support Unit; if a student is identified as potentially in need of extra support they are referred to the Support Unit for individual sessions with an academic tutor. All of this in addition to the School's extensive ongoing support services available to all students throughout their studies. At level 4 all students take a year-long study skills related module. The university's VLE has study skills-related materials such as stylebooks and shared URLs that link to various on-line study skills websites (e.g., Purdue OWL and Monash Academic Literacy sites). Throughout their degree programme all students also have the opportunity to book sessions with academic counsellors at anytime during the year to discuss individual assessments or wider study skills development.

Employability in the Curriculum:

Many Students in War Studies and Politics go on to post-graduate study including on the MA Conflict Studies at Wolverhampton. Other frequent career paths include local government employment, serving in the armed forces, teaching, administration and management posts.

The completion of a Sandwich Year will enable you to gain valuable hands on experience in a relevant work environment. This will not only provide additional practical subject skills but it will also develop personal transferable skills such as communication skills, problem solving skills and demonstrate competency in working with other people. This will increase your employability and assist you in gaining employment in the future.
